The FOOD-AWARE project aims to:

 empower children in Europe to grow into responsible and conscientious food consumers; train teachers to educate their students from a young age on the following subjects: local food production, food waste, food chain, responsible food consumption and resource efficiency including sustainability and circularity;

 raise awareness of the fact that European farmers are not getting the return they deserve for the high-quality food they produce while meeting some of the highest environmental and welfare standards in the world;

 inspire a sense of responsibility towards the planet, climate, environment and society's future in general through the project's outcomes; empower young children to build towards more sustainable futures for themselves, their own lives and that of their own children in years to come.

FOOD-AWARE project will achieve these goals by delivering educational materials in the form of training modules for teachers, interactive comics and activities, educational posters, and an animated video to name but a few.
